turned over to Major General Dix, and New York by the noted Regiment, New York Volunteers. As the funeral car passed on the ferry boat, many thousands of heads were uncovered and a chorus of two hundred trained voices sung a funeral dirge. When the ferry boat neared New York the city bells were chimed and tolled, minute guns were fired from the war vessels in the harbor and from Governor's and Ward's islands, and all the flags on the vessels in port were dipped as the boat containing the remains passed. When the funeral car, drawn by six horses, arrived at the City Hail, a chorus of one thousand trained voices from the leading singing societies sang a mournful dirge as the remains were borne up the steps into the Governor's room, where they were to he in state. The jam of people in New York exceeded anything ever before witnessed, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the procession moved through the narrow streets. All the windows, housetops, telegraph poles, etc., were filled with people. The Governor's room in the City Hall was elaborately draped and festooned with black cloth of the finest texture, with beavy silver fringe and tassels, and the center of the ceiling was dotted with silver stars. The curtains were made of heavy black silk velvet and gracefully looped with silver cords and tassels. The arrangements for viewing the body were very bad, the public being compelled to file through a narrow passage in the hall where motion was much impeded, but, notwithstanding, the crowd continued during the entire night and a part of the next day, and 100, 000 people were in line and waiting when the door of the City Hall was closed The procession from the City Hall to the Hudson-river station was the largest and most imposing ever known in this country. if not in the world. Leading the line were ten divisions of State militia, infantry and artillery, besides a num-ber of marines. Immediately following was the famous Seventh Regiment, which had been doing guard duty since the arrival of the funeral cortege. The procession was three hours in passing a given point, and contained over ten thousand soldiers, rifty thousand citizens and one hundred bands of music. There were ten thousand Freemasons in the line. Minute guns were fired and the city bells tolled during the removal of the remains to the train. After the procession had passed the reviewing stand on Union square an immense meeting was held at that place, George Bancroft, the historian, delivering the oration.

The funeral train was now on its way West, stopping only at Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Columbus, Indianapolis and Chicago before reaching Springfield, 111. where the remains found their final resting

FEELING IN THE COUNTRY. The funeral train traveled generally at night, and was preceded a haif hour by a pilot engine, in order to be assured that the road, bridges, etc., were safe. It was known to all the people on the lines of the various roads the exact moment the train bearing the body of the dead statesman would pass their respective road crossings, stations and cities, and at short intervals during the night the track between stations would be lighted for a half mile by huge bontires and from a half dozen to fifty farmer families would be standing at the roadside with heads uncovered, bowing reverently, with looks of deep sympathy as the mourning train sped onward. The stations were all draped in mourning, and at many places arches were erected over the tracks, in approaching which the train always slackened speed, and crowds stood with uncovered heads, while a local church choir, accompanied by a brass band or organ, would sing a funeral dirge, and the tolling schoolhouse and church bells would add to the selemnity of the occasion. It would be impossible to describe the decorations or give an account of the various means employed by the sorrowing people at the various places through which the funeral train passed to show their grief and respect for the dead President, but a few samples will give an idea of what occurred at each station, crossroad and along the line between stations from Washington to Springfield, Ill.:

At Dunkirk, N. Y., in the center of a vast station, were twenty-six young ladies kneeling, each holding in her hand a small flag. They were dressed in white muslin, with black sashes around their shoulders and waists. In the background was a band of music playing a funeral march. The train stopped a few moments to change engines, when the young misses entered the funeral car and placed wreaths of evergreen and flowers upon the dead President's coffic. The station was richly decorated with long waving lines of evergreens, arched from the beams, beautiful flags entwined and festooned together emblematic of the Union of the States. Minute guns were fired here as elsewhere. The train reached Rochester, N. Y., at 3:20 A. M., and it was known to all that a stop would only be made to change engines, yet there were over thirty thousand people congregated about the station, in-cluding a large number of civic and military organizations, with bands of music and choral societies, all of whom played or chanted funeral dirges, while the city bells tolled. Many of the men, women and children had been waiting all night, fearing to retire lest they should miss seeing the funeral train. All stood with their heads uncovered while the train remained, and they followed it with tearful eyes as it moved away toward the setting sun.

At many of the smaller stations during the night the people appeared with lighted torches, that burned brightly and lighted the road and train satisfactorily. At all places the anxious faces of the people showed plainly their deep sympathy with the common bereavement. The houses that could be distinguished from the train were almost universally more or less draped with emblems of monroing. Business was everywhere suspended. At no place did the occupants of the funeral train see any one engaged in labor in the fields or towns through which they passed. The solemnity of death prevailed everywhere, and all classes respected and participated in the national sorrow.

At Columbus, O., there were in the progession two carriages containing ladies dressed in deep mourning, representing the States of Kentucky and Illinois, chanting hymns in praise of the dead martyr. Their sweet, sad voices, full of electric sympathy, caused tears to fill many eyes. In the Journal of to-morrow will be given an account of the passage of the funeral train and the proceedings in this city on Sunday, April 30, 1865.

No Appeal from Satolli.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The deposition of Mgr. Satolli was taken yesterday in the matter of the church controversy at Swedesboro, N. J. In the course of the examination Mgr. Satolli testified that he was sent to the United States by the Pope, as his sole representative in the church, with jurisdiction over all Roman Catholic authorities in America; that his authority was supreme; that his decisions or affirmations of decisions of the bishops of the country was final, and that there was no appeal from his sentence. Mgr. Satolli forther testified that in the matter of Father Tracy's contention the dispute was properly before him, on appeal from the Bishop of Trenton. and that he had decreed an affirmance of the bishop's sentence of excommunication.

Now your blood should be purified. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best spring medicine and blood purifier.

The Cook Not to Blame

Many nice delicacies are often spoiled by the abominable flavorings used in them, and generally their having been spoiled is attributed to the cook. Now if are used, cooks will not be unjustly blassed; nice dishes will not be spoiled, as they always impart the delicate fresh-fruit flavor in whatever they are used. It is economy for the poorest to use the best.

WILL REPRESENT INDIANA

Col. Lilly Makes His Selection of Men for the Big Encampment Committee.

Five Names of Well-Known Men from Each County in the State, to Work Up Interest in the Great Event.

Chairman Lilly, of the citizens' executive board, yesterday completed the selection of men throughout the State who shall compose the committee on State representation, which is expected to arouse interest in the National Encampment and to organize the soldiers in each county for the purpose of attending the encampment in a body, well uniformed, and accompanied by bands. Those of the number who are members of the Grand Army of the Republic will be expected to appear in the grand review and parade of that organization on Tuesday of encampment week, but all, regardless of their membership in the G. A. R., will be expected to participate in the reunion on Wednesday, and the grand Indiana day demonstration on Thursday. Five persons in each county have been named on this committee to look after the creditable representation of their county. It is desired that this should be made one of the greatest features of the encampment. The full committee and its duties are as

CITY NEWS NOTES.

The game of ball Sunday at Lanham's will be between the Club, the home team, nd the Whitings of Chicago. Marriage licenses were issued vesterday to Harvey A. Denny and Annie C. Fisher. William G. Hollett and Luella L. Stotler. Jerry Ryan, a gas-fitter, twenty-nine ears of age, fell down the stairs at No. 69 North Alabama street, and received a severe scalp wound. He was also taken to the City Hospital in the ambulance. An alarm from Box 519 called out the fire department yesterday evening to a restdence owned by Charles Fisk, at No. 25 Michael street. The house was occupied by William Ramsey, who does not know how cover the loss. Robert Hawkins, a yellow little darkey, was flourishing a couple of razors vesterday in the vicinity of Washington and Mississippi streets, when patrolman Leppert chanced to appear. Robert found a seat in the patrol wagon and his favorite weapons confiscated. David Stewart, a house-mover, residing with his family at No. 311 Indiana avenue, had his ankle severely bruised by being caught in the machinery at Cones's overall factory, at No. 44 North Mississippi street, about 6 o'clock yesterday evening. He was removed to the City Hopital in the ambu-

Rev. Henry A. Buchtel, D. D., will preach in the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Columbus, Ind., to-morrow, and will assist the pastor, Rev. J. H. Doddridge, in taking his annual missionary collection. The Central-avenue Church pulpit will be filled, both morning and evening, by Rev. E. A. Campbell, of Seymour, Ind.

The meeting of the Art Association directors, called for yesterday morning, was so slimly attended that the business was deferred until Tuesday evening, when a meeting will be held directly after the lectore of Mrs. Frances M. Haberly at the First Baptist Church. It is quite probable that the popular picture, "Grandfather's Story," will remain in this city, as an offer has been made for it by a wealthy gentle-

The Women Have Eloped.

After a week's mysterious disappearance Mrs. Lizzie Lewis, who escaped from her father at the Spencer House while he was registering their names, has been located. The father, C. E. Miller, returned to his home at Converse, Ind., early this week, and on Thursday was notified by telegraph that his daughterhad passed through Leroy, Ill., on her way to Peoris. Mrs. Lewis's separation from her husband and subsequent flight, it is thought, were caused by an unnatural attachment for a woman of Greenfield, where she was living in apparent happiness with her busband. This woman is a Mrs. Kitty Bigger, the young wife of John Bigger, clerk of the Union House at Greenfield, and advices from that place state that she is also missing from home. It is supposed that the two women have arranged to meet in Peoria. Before Mrs. Lewis left her husband she informed him of her great love for Mrs. Bigger, and announced that she could not be happy with-

Well-Known Business Man, Formerly of Indianapolis, Dies in New York.

He Was at One Time City Librarian, and a Man Much Esteemed in the Business, Social and Church Circles of the City.

Albert C. Yohn died yesterday, at his home in New York, after an illness lasting in its final and serious nature only a short time. He never was rugged, it is said, in body, having had some disposition to pulmonary trouble, but was able to attend to business until within a few weeks. The fatal attack of sickness began with an inflammation of the liver, but the doctors thought they would be able to control it up to last Thursday. He was thought to be better on Wednesday, but the developments of the next twentyfour hours caused alarm and his mother and sister Mary started at once for New York. The disease had extended to his lungs, causing pneumonia, from which he died yesterday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. about six hours after the arrival of his mother and sister. His family and his brother were at his bedside also at the time of dissolution. The deceased was forty-six years of age, having been born in this city. He had always resided here until within six months, when he removed to New York, both for business reasons and to give his son Bert, who has disclosed artistic talents in art, a better opportunity to develop his abilities. He went east to become manager of the publishing house of Tait, Sons & Co., a position for which he was eminently qualified by reason of his long career in this city as the proprietor of a book store in the block on the corner of Washington and Meridian streets known as the Yohn Block. He continned in this business, with the exception of the time spent as city librarian, until about two years ago, when he became superintendent of the retail department of the Bowen-Merrill Company. He was a successful business man and had acquired valuable and thorough knowledge of books, having been a studious and thoughtful reader. It is of him that he possessed one of the best and most extensive private libraries in the city. His knowledge of literature and authors qualified him especially well for the position of city librarian but after serving for nearly two years he resigned on account of press of private business, and was succeeded by Mr. Evans. After the death of his father, who left a large estate, he became the real manager of the property, though his mother was appointed executrix. His father was James C. Yohn, who was a prominent citizen, once a member of the Council, and an enterprising dry goods merchant. He built the block where the book store was so long in operation, and was a very prominent man in social and business circles. Mr. Yohn married Miss Ferguson, of Piqua, O., about twenty-two years ago, Two children, both sons, and the wife survive him. He was a member of the Meridian-street M. E. Church and was active in the Sunday school and religious work of the church. In disposition he was quiet and unassuming, and very refined and kindly in manner. His life was marked by an unblemished career in business, by a consistent and useful Christian character and by scholarly attainments of no mean order. The body will be brought to this city for burial, and is expected to arrive tomorrow. The funeral will probably not occur until Monday, though nothing definite has as yet been determined. Rev. Dr. Cleveland, in speaking of Mr.

Yohn's interest in the church, said last "He was our recording secretary, after the death of his father. He was always at his post, and was a most efficient, faithful and conscientious officer. He had a large class of young ladies in Sunday school, between whom and him there was a profound respect and attachment. Everything connected with the church was to him of the first importance." base

STATE TAX FIGURES.

What the Levy of '91 Is Bringing Into the Various Funds of the Treasury.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. RIDDLE'S READINGS. Mr. Riddle began his season of readings from Victor Hugo's dramas, last evening, at Plymouth Church. Indianapolis has rarely the opportunity, if ever, to hear a theatrical performance of any of Hugo's plays. In fact, they are seldom played anywhere now. In this series of five plays Mr. Riddle presents a treat which is both literary the flames originated. Thirty dollars will and dramatic. One cannot hear him read and not distinctly appreciate every character and every situation. The reader is an artist in the truest sense of the word, and presents each part complete and with its own distinct individuality, as has been said before in these columns about Mr. Riddle's readings. In listening to him one hears a play, in which each part, no matter how insignificant, is taken by a star. The play chosen for last night was "Ruy Blas" (pronounced with the "e" sound), the one in which the great Charles Fechter made his appearance in this country, and when one hears the dramatic possibilities there is wonder aroused that it is not in the repertoire of some of the artists of the present day. Whether in the character of Ruy Blas, Don Sallust de Bazan, the Queen or the querulons old Duchess of Albuquerque nothing is lacking. In the scenes between Ruy Blas and Don Sallust he rises to absolute greatness. In every part there is just the gesture which perfects the thought. Those who do not hear Mr. Riddle in his wonderful readings miss a feast. It is an education, a pleasure and a treat. The audience, last night, was not commensurate with the merit of the performance por the ability of GRAND-"HOSS AND HOSS," At the Grand Opera House, last evening, Willie Collier and his company of funmakers began an engagement with "Hoss and Hoss." This popular farce comedy, which achieved great success in the hands of Reed and Collier before the death of the former, has been retouched and brightened, and in the hands of the Collier company will be able to retain its hold on the public indefinitely. The company includes a number of the best specialty artists in the profession. The humor of Collier is infectious and irresistible. The dancing of Louise Allen was repeatedly encored, and the music was the brightest and most sparkling, and there is not a tiresome or mediocre feature in the programme. There will be another presentation of "Hoss and Hoss" this afternoon and another this evening.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll will deliver his famous lecture on "Abraham Lincoln" at English's Thursday night of next week; the advance sale of seats beginning Mon-

"Keep It Dark" will be given its last two performances at the Park to-day. Next week this house will have two attractions. The new farce-comedy, "My Aunt Sally," Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and When you buy that you get the best and most Carrie Louis in "The Midnight Call" the latter part of the week.

The Grand Opera House will have three attractions next week. Monday night Dockstader's minstrels will play: Tuesday and Wednesday, and Wednesday matinee. the Brothers Byrne will appear in "Eight Bells," and during the remainder of the week the Lilliputians will present their new spectacular piece "Candy."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONFERENCE

Annual Gathering of the Marion County Workers at Tabernacle Church.

The annual conference of the Marion County Sunday-school Association convened at Tabernacle Church yesterday afternoon and last night, with a fair attendance. The first meeting was held at 2 P. M., opening with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. J. A. Pollock, who also presided during the exercises. After the appointment of committees Rev. F. C. Hood delivered an address on "The Sundayschool Teacher-His Character," which was followed by a discussion of the questions advanced. Rev. G. Cochran fellowed with a valuable talk on "The Sunday-school Teacher-His Qualitications."

After a song by the entire convention Rev. A. R. Steck read a paper, entitled the "Uses and Abuses of Lesson Helps." Rev. Steck held that, although these lesson helps were of much value in the Sunday school, there is great danger of their being substi-tuted for the Bible, and the scholar thereby gets no lesson from the holy book. The minister urged that these lesson studies be not neglected. "Teachers' Meetings; Are They Necessary, and How Maintained?" was the topic ably discussed by F. W. Donglass, and was followed by a general discussion. The afternoon session closed at 4 o'clock with singing. The evening session was more largely attended than in the afternoon, and was opened by song service, directed by J. A. Allison. Reports of committees were read and adopted, and the following officers named for the ensuing year:

President-J. A. Pollock.

Vice President-W. C. Hall. Secretary-J. B. McNeeley. Executive Committee-C. D. Meigs, F. C. Hood, J. A. Allison, Ida E. Anderson, Amor Clifford, F. W. Donglass, A. R. Steck.

After the election of officers the evening was taken up by addresses and discussion of the various topics selected. Miss Kirby gave some very valuable lessons on the "Primary Class Methods," and Rev. W. M. Bell, president of the State Sunday-school Union, talked on the "County and State Sunday-school Work, the State, International and World's Convention." The ques sion of the appointment of delegates to the State convention at Vincennes, June 7, 8, 9, was discussed, and the association decided to refer the selection of delegates to the executive committee. Ten representatives at large are to be chosen and each Sunday school has the privilege of sending one. Before adjourning last night resolutions were adopted expressing sorrow over the death of Albert Yohn, who was formerly closely identified with the Sabbath-school interests of this city. It was also resolved that the ministers of Marion county should be requested to set aside a day for the delivery of special sermons touching upon the vital importance of the attendance of adults on the Sunday school,

SHANKLIN'S NEW VENTURE

With Crawford Fairbanks and Others He Expects to Start a New Paper.

It. Will Be a Two-Cent Evening Daily, Independent in Politics with Leanings Toward Democracy.

John G. Shanklin, the Evansville statesman, was in town yesterday for the first time since the riot of spoils began without disclosing any wreckage for him. His business, however, was not of a political nature of the spoils order. It is evident from a remark that he dropped to a Journal reporter that he does not expect another offer of office, having, it is said, been given the refusal of being Public Printer, when he said: "Indiana is good enough for me." His errand, however, was not without political significance, being connected with the proposed establishment of an independent evening paper in this city. When interrogated by the reporter about the enterprise he said:

"I am not in a position now to talk about the matter; but as soon as we are I will be glad to tell you all about it." There is no doubt that there is a movement on foot for a new evening paper, to be of the Democratic faith. The morning organ has not been giving satisfaction to many of the party for a number of years, and the growth of the city, so the backers say, has been such as to warrant a new daily in the evening field. One of the principal promoters of the plan is Craw-ford Fairbanks, of Terre Haute, who is said to have raised a capital stock of $240,-000 for the venture. The purpose is to lease a wire from Washington and New York, and by an extensive special correspondence to acquire a telegraph service which will make the paper independent of the press associations. Ever since Indianapolis Democrats began to fatten in a financial way from office and corporation favors that seem to follow political control in a large municipality there has been the dream of an evening paper. Though the News has, of recent years, supported them in municipal and county affairs, they have felt that they could not after something of their own.

The intention of the promoters of the new enterprise is to put in the field a thoroughly equipped and newsy two-cent paper, and the amount of capital they are collecting looks as though they meant to fulfill this purpose.
